A JOINT BIOCHEMICAL SOCIETY & BSRA SCIENTIFIC CONFERENCE

Nutrition and the Biology of Ageing

12–14 September 2022
University of Kent, UK

The study of ageing is a rapidly expanding field, driven by an ageing global population and the urgent need for strategies to improve age-related health. A major discovery in the field has been that diet and nutrition controls ageing. Diet is a well-established determinant for long-life health and research in this area is key to furthering research on ageing in general.

Jointly organised by the Biochemical Society and the British Society for Research on Ageing (BSRA), this conference will bring together researchers from around the world, spanning both industry and academia, working on basic molecular and cellular processes of nutrition, its impact in metabolism and interventions to improve age-related health.
